AGH UST is a part of the consortium

EUROPEAN SPACE UNIVERSITY FOR EARTH AND HUMANITY

and has been officially recognised as a EUROPEAN UNIVERSITY in the prestigious competition “European Universities” organised by the European Commission

Thanks to the award, together with four other European universities from France, Germany, Luxembourg and Sweden, AGH UST develops education, research and technologies connected with the exploration and exploitation of outer space.

Projects and research into space technologies conducted so far at AGH UST include innovative designs of rockets, space probes, Mars rovers and stratospheric balloons, which have been developed by university students – members of the student special interest group AGH Space Systems.
Purpose of facilities:
- research and teaching facilities
